

Deploying newer technologies and increased spending on energy transition minerals seen as most effective responses to decarbonization policies and investor pressure

